Welcome

Miri Resort City is the gateway to northern Sarawak. This is a town that oil built. The bustling commercial centre is well poised to serve the cosmopolitan petroleum community and welcome tourists from all the four corners of the earth.

Miri has excellent public amenities, medical facilities, and financial institutions as well as customs and immigration offices.

Sports and recreation are high on the list. A state-of-the-art Marina attracts the international yachting community, and divers who are keen to explore the 'under water jungles' below.

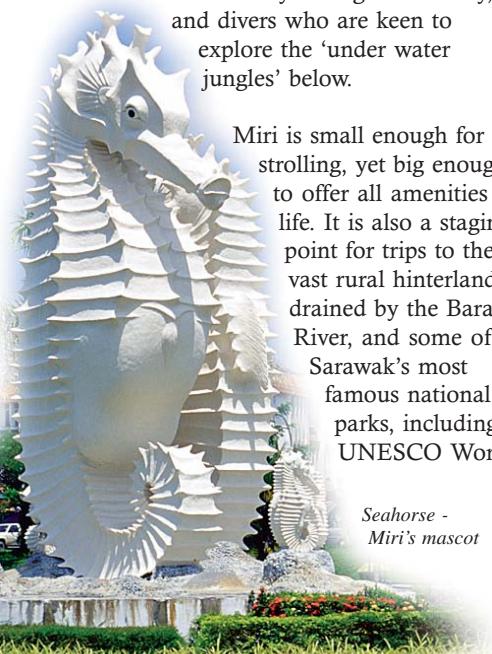

Miri is small enough for strolling, yet big enough to offer all amenities of life. It is also a staging point for trips to the vast rural hinterland drained by the Baram River, and some of Sarawak's most famous national parks, including UNESCO World Heritage Site Gunung Mulu, Niah, Lambir Hills, Loagan Bunut lake, and the cool highlands of Bario and Ba Kelalan.

Business or pleasure — Miri is the right place!

Miri oil field in early 1900's

A Brief History

Before the discovery of oil, Miri consisted of a few straggling huts by a Black River. Local residents were aware of the special nature of the greasy sludge that oozed from the ground here and there; with due caution it could be used as lighting fuel.

Mr. Claude de Crespigny, Resident of Baram, reported the presence of 'earth oil' in 1882, but it was not until two decades later that the commercial potential of this natural phenomenon was realised.

Dr. Charles Hose, a 'Rajah's (King's) Servant' still remembered for his resource, his wit and his immense girth, organized the drilling of an exploratory well on top of a hill on August 10, 1910. Within four months, oil was struck at a depth of 123 metres. The first well on the hilltop, now affectionately dubbed 'Grand Old Lady', remained productive until 1972.

By 1917 the Miri oil boom was in full spate. Foreign labours flocked in from places like Singapore, India, and Hong Kong, augmented by local brawn and muscle. Expatriate staff arrived from England and Holland; for a few years conditions in the hastily erected shantytown were chaotic.

The town gradually grew. By 1921 it had 40 shophouses, one English school, and one Chinese school.

Production of oil reached over 65,000 tons in 1922, adding welcomed revenue to the White Rajah's treasury. During World War 1, Miri supplied 267,000 tons of oil to the British Navy.

Part of the 'old Miri' as it is today

Aerial view of Miri City

Miri was designated the administrative centre of the Baram region, the Resident's office was shifted here from Marudi. In 1929, Miri was visited by Rajah Charles Vyner Brooke — a proud moment for the town.

The depression years did not leave Miri unscathed, but life went on; the predilection for rowing, cricket and football, which united expatriate and local sportsmen, survived and prospered even into the 21st century!

During the Japanese Occupation of 1941-1945 the oil fields were fiercely fought over, resulting in considerable hardship for the local population.

In the 60's, oil exploration moved offshore. When production reached 95,000 barrels a day, Petronas, the National Oil Company, made Lutong the hub of oil production activities in Miri.

Miri shared the boom of the 1980s and 90s. The face of the town changed with the construction of suburban housing, multi-storey commercial complexes and international class hotels. Tourism thrives; Miri came to be known as 'Sarawak's Northern Gateway.'

Prosperity draws population. Miri's 300,000 inhabitants are Malays, Chinese, Ibans, Orang Ulu, Melanau, Bidayuh, Penan with quite a sprinkling of expatriates happily living in harmony and are proud to contribute to make Miri a Resort City.

The petroleum industry is still an important employer, but it is the Kuala Baram Industrial Estate that provides the bulk of jobs for the thousands who now consider Miri their home.

Miri has long, white beaches, well frequented on weekends.

Luak Bay Esplanade is a meeting point for kite enthusiasts.

The beaches of Bungai and Peliau, less than an hour's drive from the city centre, offer different scenery. Local fishermen land their catches here; savvy housewives turn up at the right time to bargain for guaranteed fresh fish, prawns and other seafoods.

Miri beaches are idyllic, but it is wise to observe a few elementary rules. Large amounts of sun can be harmful. It is advisable to use sunscreen and wear a hat, and it is not advisable to go to sleep under the full sun.

Luak Bay Esplanade

Jogging and Walking

Miri is not called the Resort City for nothing! The City Fan, a complex of elegantly landscaped parks, is ideal for jogging, walking or just strolling about.

The Bulatan Park is a favourite site for jogging in the pleasant landscape with its lake.

Kenyalang Reef

Diving

The clear waters off Miri are an exciting, very accessible diving destination. Seasoned divers have affirmed that the magnificent marine life and coral reefs here are amongst the world's finest, some situated a mere 15-minute boat trip from town. Divers from Sarawak Shell Petroleum discovered these unique sites during underwater explorations in the 1980s.

Popular dive sites include Barracuda Point, Anemone Garden, Grouper Patch Reef, Atago Maru Wreck, and the Seafan Garden. The Luconia area equals any top dive site in terms of diversity and visibility.

Miri's Tropical Dives offers day trips and longer excursions.

Call (6 085) 414300 for further information. Fish Eye Charter provides 'live-on-board' experience on longer trips to the offshore shoals. Please log on their website, fisheyechanter.com for information and details.

In November 2004, a small rig was converted into an artificial reef. Underwater regulars have the unique opportunity of keeping an eye on the Kenyalang reef and witness how a reef grows!

At the Miri Handicraft Centre at Jalan Brooke, all of Sarawak's handicrafts can be found under one roof. Craftsmen and women often ply their trade here, happy to chat with visitors and explain the details of their handiwork.

One unique feature of Sarawak crafts are beads. These colourful trinkets have been used for centuries, not only for personal decoration but also as a form of currency, for dowries, and for spiritual purposes. The Orang Ulu are well known for their beadwork, such as their unique beaded baby carriers.

Penan women plait distinctive black-and-white mats and basket, some so fine as to be almost waterproof! The Orang Ulu prefer natural colours for their mats, baskets and hats, enlivened by colourful glass beads.
